I agree Ken, I will include that.
I'm done being nice.

I love the fact that yes if you have concerns please address the school board, but to include the newspaper and trying to incite some sort of media backlash in the community. Are they really looking out for the kids or writing for some warped reality-based cable show!

I am working on a response, I will send out for anyone to add thoughts.
I'm jotting thoughts down and will type the email tomorrow once I've cooled off

I am embarrassed for Diana that she would simultaneously thank us for our service and implicitly accuse all of us of not honoring the listed responsibilities. I know she and most others don't understand all of the hours we put in, and certainly don't understand that in the instances we are dealing with that the focus is indeed on our children, and they (i.e., our witch hunting friends) are inadvertently arguing for us to do the opposite.
Although I would love to go nuts and wrestle in the mud, wrestling with a pig just gets everyone dirty.

Would someone be able to begin a high road response to the general concerns, address her questions #1 and #2, and once again give the same exact response we gave earlier today to #3? I'm sort of booked until Friday.

We should say something to the effect- we take the safety of the children very seriously, the fact that your child or children made it home safely after school is a testament to this goal. We are fortunate that we don't Live in a community that has have to face these types of concerns daily, thank everyone for that. But to question authority that is in place to handle such matters, shows that the general public really interested in answers nor the safety of its children or staff who are doing what's right in these situations!

It's a thankless job most feel is best handled by others, until decisions come about that challenge the masses, fortunately we are not like most!

Attached is a VERY rough draft (without corrections) response to Diana. Please read, omit, add and correct anything you see. I would like to send this to her by tomorrow evening.

Thank you
Kristen

There is so much more that I would like to include, but we have to take the high road. They are NOT looking out for the best interests of the students, they are trying to divide the community.

I will read again this afternoon when I get a chance to cool down some.
